

REMARKS/ARGUMENTS

In response to correspondence mailed on October 13, 2006 requesting the submission of fee for excess claims, or the submission of an amendment canceling excess claims. Applicant is submitting a new amendment and the excess claims have been canceled.

This current response is in compliance with the response to Office Action that was mailed on June 02, 2006 and the explanation of previous correspondence is accompanied therefore. Applicant has cancelled independent claim 176 and all its dependent claims, and independent claim 205 and all of its dependent claims as well.

Independent claim 190 has been amended to recite two distinct content, "a first content" hosted by the first software element and "a second content" hosted by the second software element.

Also, claim 190 has been amended to state that the two distinct content virtually hosted by the third software element and the third software element not having either content duplicated at its hosting means.

These amendments will distinguish the applicant's invention from the prior art (Nahan et al – US patent # 5,999,915) since Nahan shows the first, second and third software elements, each having the same duplicated contents hosted by one another.

All subsequent dependent claims have been amended and the words "a" has been cancelled, also "a first... a second..." to indicate distinctiveness of two or more references of the same category as suggested by the examiner.

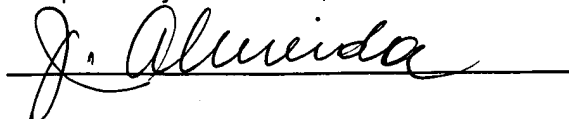

As to forth and fifth software elements please find support on fig. 15. Since fig. 15 is a further embodiment of fig. 11. Fig. 15 shows the same arrangement of fig. 11 used over a network or over the Internet. Although fig. 15 does not show all the elements of fig. 11 and it is done as is for sake of simplicity and not intended to limit the applicant's invention. Furthermore, anyone skilled in the art will be able to use the teaching of the arrangement of fig. 11 and implement its functionality on fig. 15.
